

OT05: I've heard you mention that your interest in the Game Boy Camera helped introduce you to the homebrew music programs. Though the music snared your attention, do you ever find time for Game Boy photography?

BS: I dabbled a little in the early '00s but haven't really done any of it since. At the time it was tricky to back the camera cartridge up, but I'm sure there are newer solutions out there now that probably make it easier. I just got back from a gig in San Francisco where someone was taking photos with a Game Boy Camera that they'd modded with a telephoto lens. So it seems like there's definitely been some modernization of the process.

OT05: Maladaptive Strategies Vol. 2 is still fresh on the market, do you have any other projects, sites or productions that you would like to promote?

BS: Thanks for mentioning that! Yeah the Maladaptive Strategies release series is an ongoing effort to collect non-album Bit Shifter tracks that have piled up over the years; mostly tracks that had been exclusive to various compilations, with some unreleased stuff thrown in too. Vol. 2 collects all my non-album nanoloop material, and I am really happy to finally have it out there, all in one place. The series is actively ongoing — a Vol. 3 is forthcoming, and possibly a Vol. 4. So please stay tuned for that...!
